Hello & welcome

Brussels, after Washington, is the second biggest diplomatic hub in the world. It hosts a large public, private and civil society policy community working in the areas of global and regional public policy.

The capital of Europe is therefore the location par excellence to establish a professional school of international governance and public affairs that combines international quality in both undergraduate and graduate teaching, cutting-edge research and extensive academic services. As an alliance of two long-standing frontrunners on the international academic scene, this is exactly the ambition of the Brussels School of Governance.

With a dedicated staff of more than 200 people, a good balance between research and education, a strong regional and international network, and a focus on innovation and outreach, we believe all our stakeholders can greatly benefit from our expertise, be they students, policy makers, the academic community, or the general public.

- Interdisciplinary: in our research as well as in our teaching we have a decidedly interdisciplinary approach, focusing on some of the most urgent governance challenges confronting policy makers worldwide.

A BRIEF HISTORY

The Brussels School of Governance is the alliance between the Institute for European Studies (°2002) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel and Vesalius College (°1987). For decades, the IES and Vesalius College have built up strong reputations as frontrunners in education, research, and academic services on the international scene. Both being associated with Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB), one of Belgium's prime universities with a strong internationalisation focus, the Institute for European Studies and Vesalius College decided to work together more closely as of 2018.

Since the autumn of 2019, both institutions have aligned the members of its Boards and management teams. In 2021, they launched the Brussels School of Governance.

RESEARCH

The Brussels School of Governance's multidisciplinary research activities focus on some of the most urgent governance challenges confronting policy makers in Europe as well as elsewhere in the world in years to come. They cover four broad policy areas: the sustainability transition; the impact of migration on European, national and regional identities; the shifts in political and military competition between the great powers and their implications for European defence and diplomacy; and the way that new digital technologies challenge existing organisational and management habits and routines, question education and participative democracy more broadly defined. In line with these areas, we have established a structure of four research centres.

The major challenges mentioned require quite fundamental, sometimes even radical transformations in the nature and scope of governance models that were developed over the last decades. Addressing them requires contributions from a broader set of academic disciplines, going beyond the usual set of social sciences, as well as insights from different public policy administrations on all different levels.

From our strategic location in Brussels, our ambition is to tackle the four research areas both with an outward look, i.e. how these major developments affect the position of Europe in the world, as well as with an inward look, focusing on their possible consequences for the redesign of Europe's internal governance system. Challenge accepted!

Alexander Mattelaer, Vice-Dean for Research

OUR RESEARCH CENTRES

The Research Centre for Digitalisation, Democracy and Innovation conducts cutting-edge academic and policy-relevant research on the ongoing digital transformation of society. We critically examine the evolution of new (digital) modes of governance from an interdisciplinary perspective, specifically multistakeholder and democratic processes that involve private, public, and civil society actors, whilst paying attention to issues of power and participation.

Does technology break down barriers to participate in decision-making? What are visible and invisible barriers to participation? How do traditional public values translate into an online environment? Do we govern technology or does technology govern us? Can governance of the Internet be entrusted to private actors alone?

Such questions address the difficulties in leveraging new technologies to enable effective citizen participation, the growing need for continued stakeholder engagement in global, European, national and local governance, and the need for concerted regulation and novel governance approaches in the digital environment.

Innovation and Future of Education

The Research Centre for Environment, Economy and Energy operates at the crossroads of today's turbulent transitions, which constitute key governance challenges and opportunities in Europe and worldwide. The sustainability imperative requires private and public decision-makers to steer our societies towards decarbonised, resource efficient economies as recognised in the European Green Deal, New Generation Europe, in the 2015 Paris Agreement and the Sustainable Development Goals. If governed successfully, this presents the prospect of rejuvenating our socio-economic and political systems, making them fit for a sustainable future.

The Centre analyses and develops innovative legal and policy instruments that can be used to govern the transitions, within the EU and in its external relations. Positioning ourselves at the interface of academia with political, legal and other societal decision-making, we focus in particular on the international and European governance of the environmental, economic and energy transitions and their interactions.

The techno-economic transition

Democratic transition governance

Reconciliation of values

Innovative laws, policies and policy frameworks

European external relations

The Research Centre for Migration, Diversity and Justice focuses on the multi-level governance and politics of immigration, justice and home affairs, immigrant integration, diversity and equality. It hosts the VUB's Interdisciplinary Research Centre on Migration and Minorities (BIRMM), which gathers more than 100 VUB researchers from 11 disciplines.

Controlling who enters and who stays in the national territory, who has the right to be a member of the national community, and what rights members and non-members of the national community have, have long been considered a prerogative of the nation state. Yet, during the last decades, elements of these policy areas have been shifted upwards, to the international level (EU and international organizations), downwards, to the sub-state level (regional and local authorities) and outwards (to countries of origin, transit and private actors). Whilst many research institutes study immigration and immigrant integration, we distinguish ourselves by our multi-level governance focus, as well as by the prioritisation of three key themes that will prominently figure on European and national policy agendas in the coming decade.

EU asylum and migration governance, with a particular focus on its external dimension and the involvement of third states in the governance of immigration

European anti-discrimination policies and politics

EU Justice and Home Affairs

The Center for Security, Diplomacy and Strategy seeks to contribute to a better understanding of the key contemporary security and diplomatic challenges of the 21st Century – and their impact on Europe – while reaching out to the policy community that will ultimately need to handle such challenges. Our expertise in security studies will seek to establish comprehensive theoretical and policy coverage of strategic competition and its impact on Europe, whilst paying particular attention to the transatlantic relationship and the wider Indo-Pacific region. Diplomacy as a field of study will be treated broadly and comparatively to encompass traditional statecraft and foreign policy analysis, as well as public, economic and cultural diplomacy.

CSDS builds on a critical mass of scholars with expertise and publication track record in the areas of diplomacy and security, and an ample network of policy and expert contacts within Brussels and beyond. Thanks to its Korea Chair and Japan program, CSDS is also emerging as a European hub for analysis of geopolitical and security dynamics in East Asia.

STUDENT SERVICES

The Brussels School of Governance offers students the best of both worlds: the personal attention and community environment of a small school, as well as access to the resources of major universities. The school shares relevant academic events and guest lectures, and also participates in faculty exchanges with the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, the Université Libre de Bruxelles, the University of Kent in Brussels and Georgetown University, among others.

The Brussels School of Governance has an active and long-standing Study Abroad programme, welcoming every year students from across the globe for a semester as an 'incoming' student, but also sending students from its own undergraduate programmes abroad for an unforgettable 'outgoing' study abroad experience. Brussels School of Governance students may study abroad either at one of our partner institutions or at an approved college or university of their choice.

RESEARCH AND LIBRARY SERVICES

Students at the Brussels School of Governance have access to extensive resources for research at three major libraries: the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, the Université Libre de Bruxelles and The Royal Library, Belgium's national library. Together, they provide students with access to over five million books. In addition, students have access to a wide variety of online resources including thousands of journals and newspapers, library catalogues and databases.

COMPUTER RESOURCES

Computer and internet access is an essential part of student life. The Brussels School of Governance computer lab is equipped with PCs and Apple computers as well as facilities for students with laptops to connect to the School's computer network. Students also have access to the extensive computer resources at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, including the free campuswide wireless network.

ENGLISH & MATH WORKPLACE*

Strong language skills are crucial for academic achievement, as well as professional success. The English & Math Workplace aims to help students develop their ability to efficiently and effectively communicate their ideas in writing, in English. The Workplace also provides tutorial sessions for math and statistics courses. The Workplace directors offer students individual help on topics such as text structure, style, clarity and grammar in a relaxed and friendly environment to develop their writing skills.

PSYCHOLOGICAL COUNSELLING

Moving to a new country, living alone, and facing the pressure of exams are just a few of the major changes that students may experience. The Brussels School of Governance offers free psychological counselling to students who would like to speak to a professional about missing home, exam pressure, or other challenges they might face.

* Available for Undergraduate students only

HEALTH SERVICES

The medical centre on the VUB campus provides medical assistance to students and staff. This includes consultation in case of illness, accidents, minor medical procedures, vaccinations, preventive care, etc.

HOUSING

To help students get settled in Brussels and ready to begin classes, our School provides them with links to help find suitable off-campus housing. With the large number of universities and higher education institutions in Brussels, student rooms are widely available. For off-campus housing, rates and availability, students can refer to www.brik.be/en. Our School also has access to VUB on-campus housing. For more information, visit www.uresidence.be. Study abroad students who join our School for one semester have the opportunity to stay with a local host family. This type of accommodation offers the student a unique experience that gives insight into the everyday life of Belgian families, culture, and social norms.

FOOD SERVICES

Every day, the VUB campus cafeteria serves a wide selection of warm and cold dishes, snacks, sandwiches and drinks - all at student friendly prices. Students pay a fixed price depending on the dish chosen. The set menus include soup, a main course and a dessert. There are daily vegetarian and vegan options. The cafeteria was awarded the MSC Sustainable Seafood Certificate in 2013 and also sources many of its ingredients from organic farms. It also serves breakfast, sandwiches and drinks. Students can also find two snack bars on campus: 't Complex and Opinio.

With numerous spacious parks and a vast forest within a stone's throw of the city, students also have many opportunities for practising outdoor sports.

INTERNSHIPS AND CAREERS

INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

At the Brussels School of Governance, we want to offer our students not only valuable academic preparation, but also the opportunity to test career options, gain practical experience and build relationships with professionals and organisations in their areas of interest, before they graduate.

We offer a variety of internship opportunities to students, both in our BA and MA programmes. The internship is evaluated with a letter grade and is worth 1 academic course in ECTS credits. Our internship partners are prestigious and internationally renowned organisations and companies, ranging from European agencies to small start-up businesses, from think-tanks to international corporations. They provide our students with an excellent opportunity to implement what they have learned in the classroom and apply it to the real world, in a professional environment in Brussels, the 'Capital of Europe'.

OFFICE FOR TEACHING

AND LEARNING INNOVATION

For many years, the two members of the Brussels School of Governance alliance have built a solid reputation in teaching and learning innovation. Long before the COVID-19 pandemic, blended and online learning was part of its educational portfolio. With the establishment of an Office for Teaching and Learning Innovation (OTLI) in the Spring of 2020, our School has taken the next step in this essential development towards the 'education of the future'.

The OTLI serves as a knowledge hub for the School's teaching staff and focuses on pedagogical innovation and the use of technology to enhance learning. Concretely, its dedicated team works on the design and implementation of sustainable teaching and learning policies that aim to improve the student learning experience for all course formats, from face-to-face to blended to fully online. In doing so, the OTLI team attaches great importance to student participation through continuous student feedback, in a spirit of co-creation, leading to the best result for all concerned.

Educational innovation is key for our School. Along with personalised attention for our students, it is what sets us apart. Therefore, the OTLI will be a cornerstone of our educational strategy in years to come. With this in-house experience, we want to pass a clear message to our current and future students: no matter what type of learning experience you have with us, face-to-face, blended or online, it will always be personal, flexible and high-quality.

LIFE IN BRUSSELS

The Brussels School of Governance encourages students to work hard to reach their academic potential, but also to live a full life away from books and classes and enjoy everything that Brussels has to offer.

Although the international business and political world form an important part of Brussels' culture, students quickly discover that it is vibrant and cosmopolitan with a warm, friendly charm. The quaintness of its cobblestone streets and rich variety of beer, chocolate and lace give the city a festive ambiance. 30% of the Brussels population is comprised of foreign nationals, so the city has something for every taste and culture in the areas of music, dancing, cuisine, art, associations and much more.

The city is home to an excellent music scene, with clubs and numerous festivals where almost any genre of music can be found from local musicians to the biggest touring bands. Brussels also has many museums and art galleries, ranging from classical to modern art, and also houses a national symphony, opera and theatre. In addition, Brussels has a rich variety of architecture including Baroque buildings from the 1600s, classic Flemish, art deco, art nouveau, and the modern architecture of the European Union buildings.

Finally, no description of Brussels would be complete without mentioning its renowned fine gastronomy. Ranging from prize-winning haute cuisine to the tastiest chocolate, beer, mussels and fries in the world, there is surely a dish for everyone.

Studying in Brussels affords students the unique opportunity to go on some great (as well as quick and inexpensive) travels and getaways. Belgium's inter-city trains provide quick access to the coast of Flanders, Medieval Bruges, Antwerp (the diamond capital of the world), and the wooded hills of the Ardennes. Looking beyond Belgium, Brussels is the ideal base from which to visit the rest of Europe. Paris is a short 90 minutes by fast train and London, Cologne and Amsterdam are just two and a half hours away. In addition, most major European cities are two hours or less away by plane.

Our students visiting European institutions, enjoying the city of Brussels and celebrating their graduation
